CHANGES IN ACCOUNTING POLICIES

IFRS 16, Leases

This standard replaces IAS 17 Leases and became effective for the Company on September 1, 2019. IFRS 16 eliminates the classification of leases as either operating or finance leases for a lessee. Instead, all leases except for short-term (less than 12 months) and low-value leases are capitalized by recognizing the present value of lease payments and recognizing an asset and a financial liability representing an obligation to make future lease payments. The principles in IFRS 16 provide a more consistent approach to acquiring the use of an asset whether by leasing or purchasing an asset. The adoption of this standard did not have a material measurement or disclosure impact on the Company's condensed interim financial statements.

FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS

The Company is exposed, in varying degrees, to a variety of financial related risks. The fair value of the Company's financial instruments, including cash, amounts receivable and accounts payable and accrued liabilities approximates their carrying value due to their short-term nature.

The following describes the risk exposure of the Company and the way in which such exposure is managed:

Credit Risk

Credit risk is the risk of financial loss to the Company if a customer or counterparty to a financial instrument fails to meet its contractual obligations. Credit risk arises from cash held with banks and financial institutions as well as accounts receivable. The Company's cash is held at a major Canadian financial institution.

Accounts receivable consist of Goods and Services Tax receivable from the Government of Canada. The maximum exposure to credit risk is equal to the carrying value of the financial assets.

Interest Rate Risk

Interest rate risk is the risk that future cash flows will fluctuate as a result of changes in market interest rates. The Company has no interest-bearing financial assets or liabilities.

Liquidity Risk

Liquidity risk is the risk that the Company will encounter difficulty in meeting obligations associated with its financial liabilities. The Company manages liquidity risk by maintaining sufficient cash to enable settlement of transactions on the due date. Management monitors the Company's contractual obligations and other expenses to ensure adequate liquidity is maintained.

DIGITAL CURRENCY AND RISK MANAGEMENT

Digital currencies are measured at fair value, determined by taking the rate from www.coindesk.com.

Digital currency prices are affected by various forces including global supply and demand, interest rates, exchange rates, inflation or deflation and the global political and economic conditions. The profitability of the Company is directly related to the current and future market price of coins; in addition, the Company may not be able to liquidate its inventory of digital currency at its desired price if required. A decline in the market prices for coins could negatively impact the Company's future operations. The Company has not hedged the conversion of any of its coin sales or future mining of digital currencies.

Digital currencies have a limited history and the fair value historically has been very volatile. Historical performance of digital currencies is not indicative of future price performance. The Company's digital currencies currently consist of Bitcoin. The table below shows the impact of the 25% variance in the price of each of the Company's digital currencies on the Company's earnings before tax, based on their closing prices at February 29, 2020.

		Impact of 25% variance in price
Bitcoin	$	9,475

RISK AND UNCERTAINTIES

The Company faces a number of risks that are related to both the general cryptocurrency business as well as the Company's business model. Certain risks are discussed below and additional risks are discussed in the prospectus filed on www.sedar.com on January 31, 2019.

The Company is at risk due to the volatility/momentum pricing of any underlying digital currency mined by the Company and held in inventory – wide fluctuations in price, speculation, negative media coverage (highlighting for example, regulatory actions and lawsuits against industry participants) and downward pricing (and in particular Bitcoin and Bitcoin Cash) may adversely affect investor confidence, and ultimately, the value of the Company’s digital currency inventory which may have a material adverse affect on the Company, including an adverse effect on the Company’s profitability from current operations. The Company is also at risk due to the volatility of network hashrates (and lag between network hashrate and underlying cryptocurrency pricing), which may have an adverse effect on the Company’s costs of mining. The Company is also at risk due to volatility in energy (electricity) pricing, a key factor in the Company’s profitability of its mining operations, which is subject to, among other things, government regulation and natural occurrences which affect pricing. The Company may not be able to liquidate its digital currency inventory at economic values, or at all. Due to the newness of the industry, the Company may have restricted access to services available to more mainstream businesses (for example, banking services), and the general acceptance and use of digital currencies may never gain widespread or significant acceptance, which may materially adversely affect the value of the Company’s digital currency inventory and long-term prospects of current operations. The Company may be required to sell its digital currency inventory in order to pay for its ongoing expenses (and in particular, expenses to maintain the Company’s facilities and pay ongoing cloud agreement fees), and such sales may not be available at economic values. Given the novelty of digital currency mining and associated businesses, insurance of this nature is generally not available, or uneconomical for the Company to obtain which leads to the risk of inadequate insurance coverage. The occurrence of an event that is not covered or fully covered by the Company’s existing insurance may have a material adverse affect on the Company. Additionally, while the Company takes measures to mitigate against losses of this nature, the Company’s mined digital currency may be subject to loss, theft, or restriction on access, including loss due to cybercrime (hacking).

In terms of regulatory risks, governments may take action in the future that prohibit or restrict the right to acquire, own, hold, sell, use or trade digital currencies or exchange digital currencies for fiat currency. Such restrictions, while impossible to predict, could result in the Company liquidating its digital currency inventory at unfavourable prices which may have a material adverse affect on the Company.

Subsequent to quarter-end, there was a global pandemic outbreak of COVID-19. The actual and threatened spread of the virus globally has had a material adverse effect on the global economy; specifically, the regional economies in which the Company operates. The pandemic could continue to have a negative impact on the stock market, including trading prices of the Company’s shares and its ability to raise new capital. These factors, among others, could have a significant impact on the Company’s operations.
